

Policy Regarding Romantic or Sexual Relationships

Auburn University prohibits all faculty, administrators and supervisors, including graduate teaching assistants, from pursuing romantic or sexual relationships with undergraduate students whom they are currently supervising or teaching. ♦ Auburn University also prohibits all faculty, administrators and supervisors from pursuing romantic or sexual relationships with graduate students and employee subordinates whose work they supervise. ♦ Anyone involved in a romantic or sexual relationship with someone over whom he/she has supervisory power must recuse him/herself from decisions that affect the evaluation, participation, employment conditions, instruction, grading and/or the academic status of the subordinate involved.

